Wesley looked out for his family in a rundown district of London and never wanted to get involved with the New Imperium--the one-world government established to rebuild Earth's economy and population after its devastating war, but became corrupt over time. Wesley accepted his fate, which was given as an expiration on his birth certificate like everyone else. His time was almost up, where the government would send out their specialized termination squads to claim his expiration, but he could buy more time--more days so that he could get his family to the privileged safe haven known as Elyse. Could he save them all? Could he buy them all time before their lives became expired and were forced into labor camps or had their organs harvested? Was Elyse reachable? His time was running out.
