Widowed and alone, and now about to be evicted from her boarding house, Mary Worthington has nowhere else to turn. Hoping for the best, she heads west to marry a Mr. Cletus Carrington, a rancher in the wilds of the Texas frontier. Though taken aback at first by the man's short stature and confident demeanor, she soon finds herself drawn to him—and drawn into his battle with a band of cattle rustlers. Cletus Carrington may be short in height, but he is long in honor. As he faces down the rustlers, with Mary by his side, he also searches for a better way out of this mess. A way that does not end in sadness and loss. As the tensions come to a head in the dusty streets, it is Mary who helps them all see a gentler path, a path that leads to forgiveness and redemption. Sometimes, it takes an outsider to help us see inside ourselves.
