Irish Historic Houses Kevin O'Connor

Ireland's historic houses are a glorious part of her history and heritage. Their range is incredible: a large country house whose family still live on the site they occupied 1500 years ago; the humble cottage of a future President of the United States; great mansions packed with treasures; houses that feature in poetry and song as well as in history. There are former castles and abbeys and the most beautiful gardens and parklands. This colour-illustrated, pocket-sized guide includes a selection of around 80 of the best-known locations open to the public. Each individual entry is illustrated in colour and all practical details a visitor needs to plan and enjoy a visit are provided. There is up-to-date information on: opening times, dates and admission charges; locations and access; facilities such as tea rooms and shops; disabled access; and, map of locations. A concise description of each location is given, covering its history, former inhabitants, architecture, contents and any other special features. Other books by Kevin O'Connor - "Ironing the Land".
